Chapter 1 by EmmaGrace

Emma Von Adams was an entirely ordinary girl. She went to an ordinary school, she had an ordinary crush on an ordinary boy named Josh, she wore ordinary jeans and ordinary t-shirts. However, what happened to her was the opposite.

One day as she walked home from the movie theater with her best friend Olivia, thin red haired girl, a tall, thin man in a tuxedo stepped out from an alley, right in front of them. They were deep in conversation and crashed right into the man.

"Hello," he said to Olivia. "Would you like a ride?" He clapped his hands and a limousine appeared out of thin air. The girls rushed forward, scared of the man, for this could have been nothing but witchcraft.

And they were right.

The man shouted an odd, hissing, sharp combination of vowels, and Olivia vanished. Emma caught a glance of her dear friend's fiery ginger hair. And the limousine vanished.

Chapter 2 by Hanna Tolander

For a whole minute Emma just stood there, out of breath and in disbelief. Did that just happen? She looked around but the street was empty. No help to be found; no witnesses. But Olivia was gone.

He came for her, thought Emma. He talked to her, not to me. But why? Emma had known Olivia for many years, and Olivia had no interest in magic or witchcraft. She didn't even want to consult an ouija board for fun last Summer, when they went to camp together and one of the other girls suggested they'd try the ouija.

What if Olivia had some kind of... See more of Story Wars ...the kind of Hogwarts invitation? But the man had felt dangerous. ...na would have added that magic also didn't exist but

I have to talk to the police, Emma thought. Of course they wouldn't believe her and it was probably best to lie. She'd just say that she and Olivia had argued, they'd split up, and then she'd heard a noise, turned around and seen Olivia being abducted by a strange man. That was as close to the truth that she could go if she wanted them to believe her.

And then there was another, burning question: How to get Olivia back.

How do you find someone that magically disappeared into thin air?

Step one - find out if Olivia had any dark secrets. Some kind of magical inheritance, a crazy aunt that actually was a real witch, something like that. Emma would have to talk to Olivia's obnoxious big brother Lionel. If there were any family secrets, he'd know. He always snooped around, looking for gossip, secrets and scandals. He'd know.
